

SUSTCOREPORT

King and Peterson Plc's
SustCoReport BASE

Core analysis based on ISO 26000 and
TS2

Introduction

We, King and Peterson Plc, has September 9, 2002 analyzed our operations using the tool SustCoReport BASE. This report sums up the results and is a first step in our work to maximize our contribution to sustainable development.

SustCoReport is based on the International Standard ISO 26000 and the Swedish standard TS2:2021. The report includes stakeholder priorities and the United Nation's global goals for sustainable development.

ISO 26000 contains at least 450 advice and was developed over 5 years through negotiations between about 400 experts from 100 countries and 40 international organizations. The Swedish standard TS2 contains 50 questions that can be used to self-declare contribution to sustainable development.

Principles

The international standard ISO 26000 contains 7 principles that are applied in 7 core subject areas. The 7 principles are relevant for all companies and organizations but to various degrees. Our ability to understand and apply these principles within the core subjects form a basis for how we can contribute to sustainable development in an efficient way.

Figure 1 shows our analysis of the 7 principles: how important the principles are perceived to be for us; and to what extent the principles have been applied by us. A large difference between these two assessments can form a basis for re-prioritization.

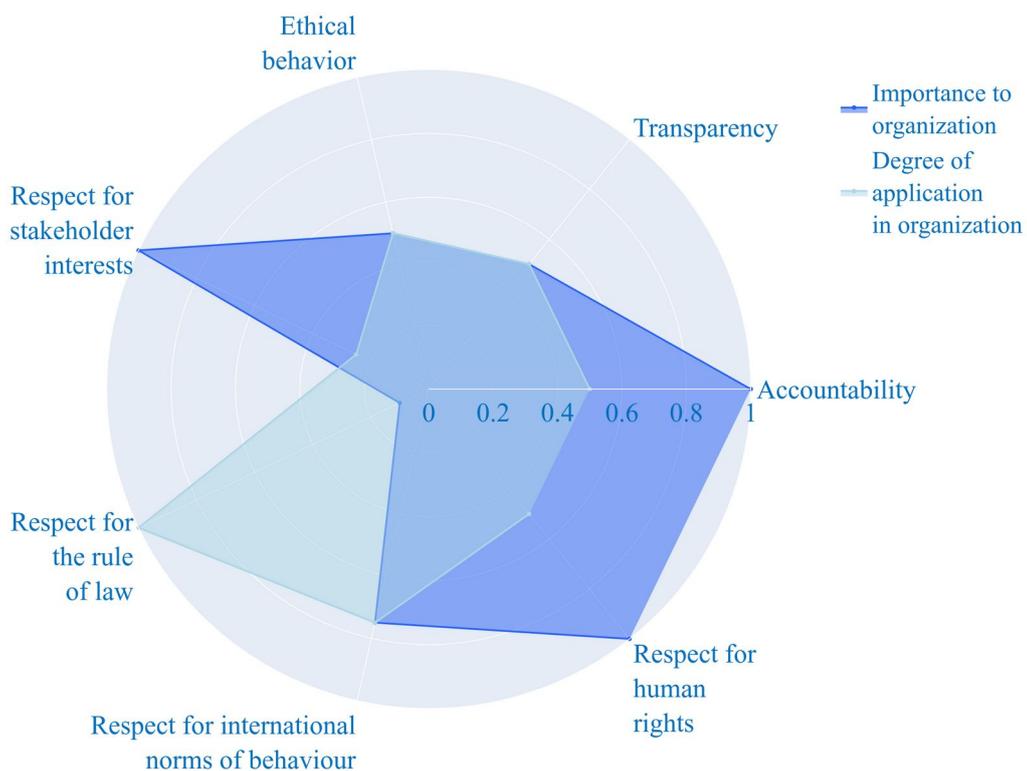

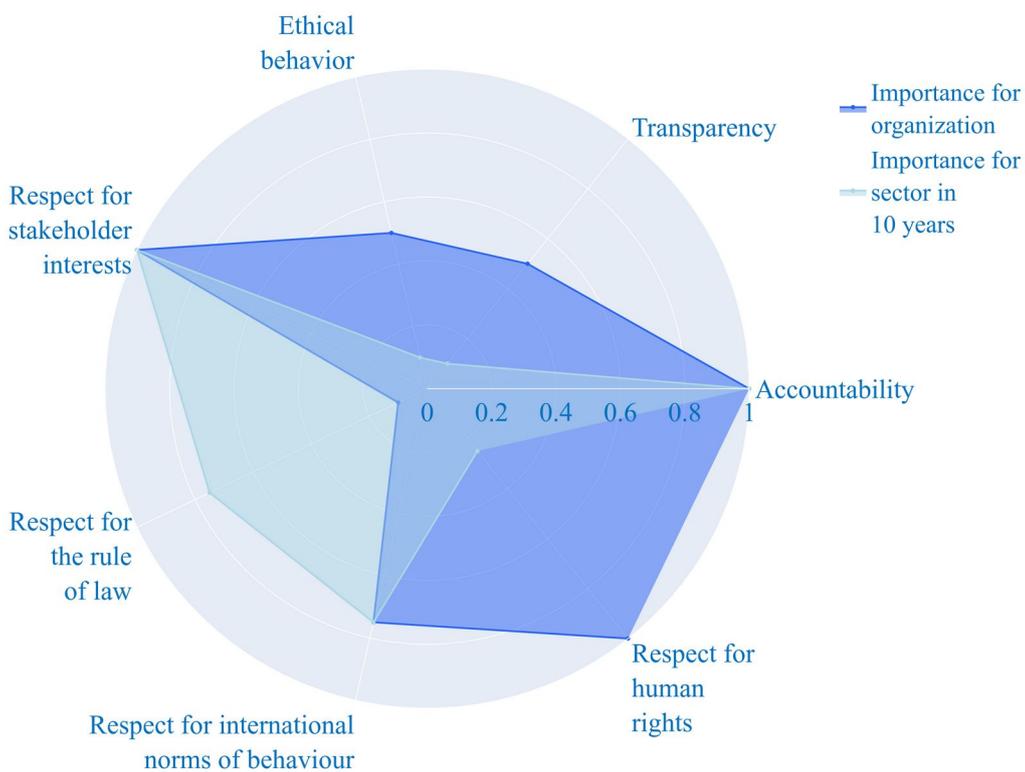

Figure 2 shows our analysis of the 7 principles: importance of the principles for our operations today, and estimated importance for the entire sector in 10 years. A large difference between these two assessments can form a basis for re-prioritization.

Figure 2. Estimated importance of the principles for operations and future importance for the whole sector

Core subjects

ISO 26000 contains 7 core subjects and most of these are relevant for all organizations. Our ability to understand and control our impacts within the most important core subjects forms the basis for how we can contribute efficiently to sustainable development.

Figure 3 shows our analysis of the core subject areas: our estimated current impact on the core subjects; and stakeholders' estimated view of our impacts on the core subjects. A large difference between these two assessments may motivate a re-prioritization.

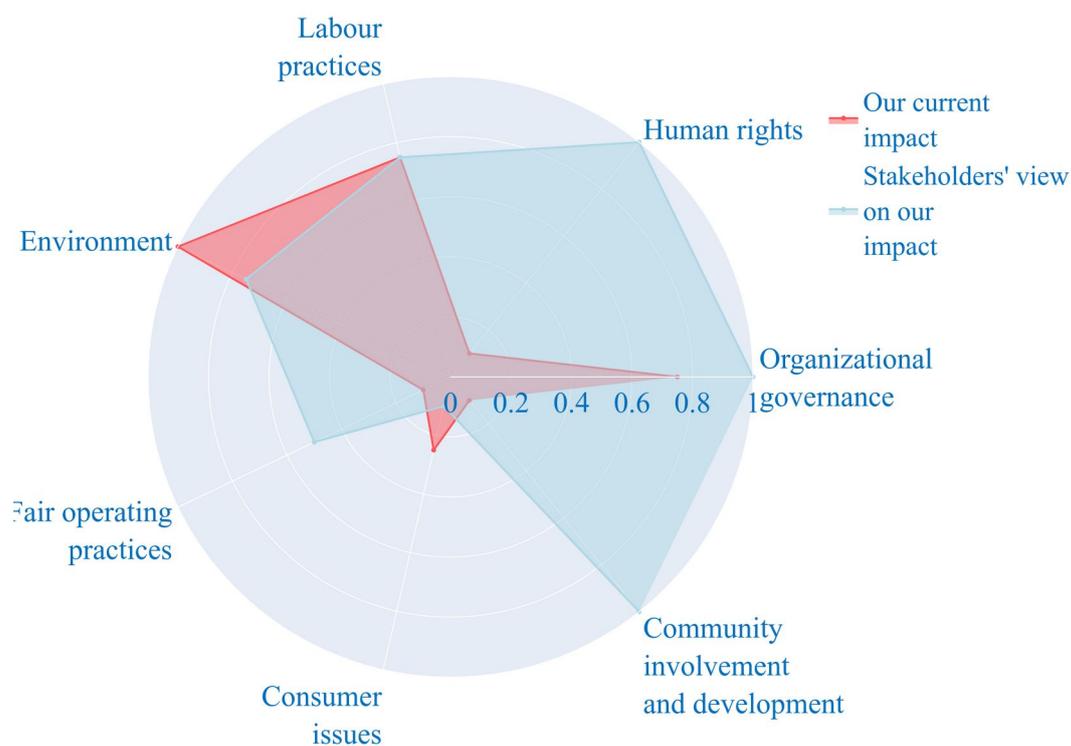

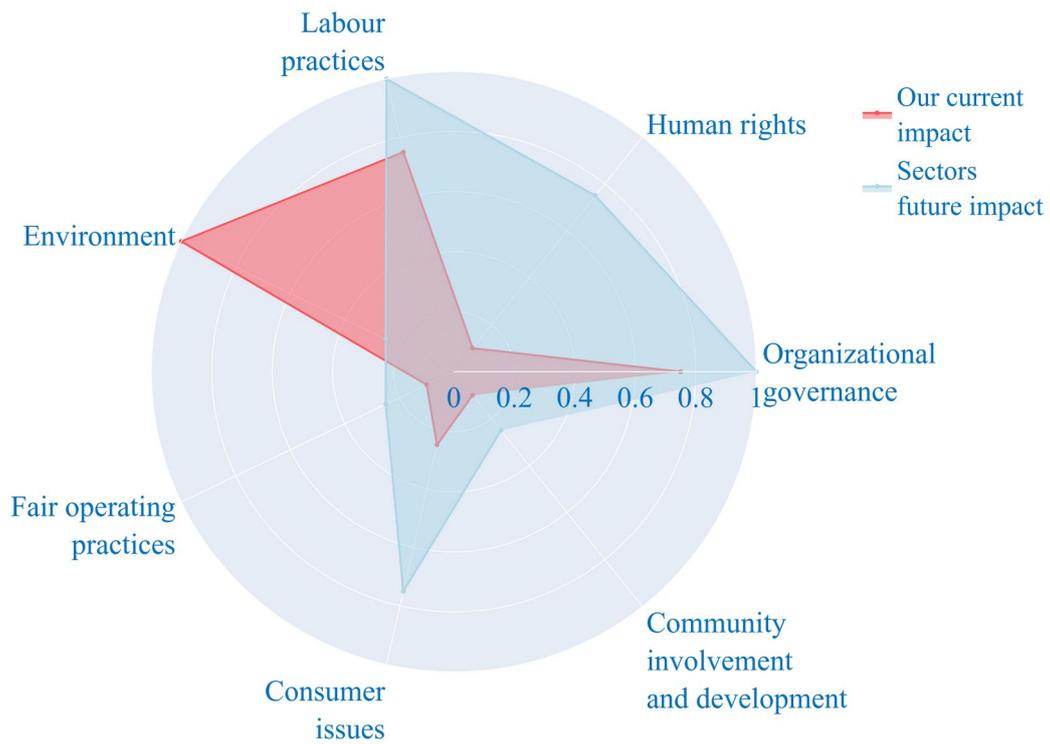

Figure 4 shows our analysis of the 7 core subject areas: the estimated impact of the core subjects; and the sector's estimated future impact on core subjects in 10 years. A large difference between these two assessments may motivate a re-prioritization.

Figure 4. Current impact and estimated future impact from the sector (in 10 years)

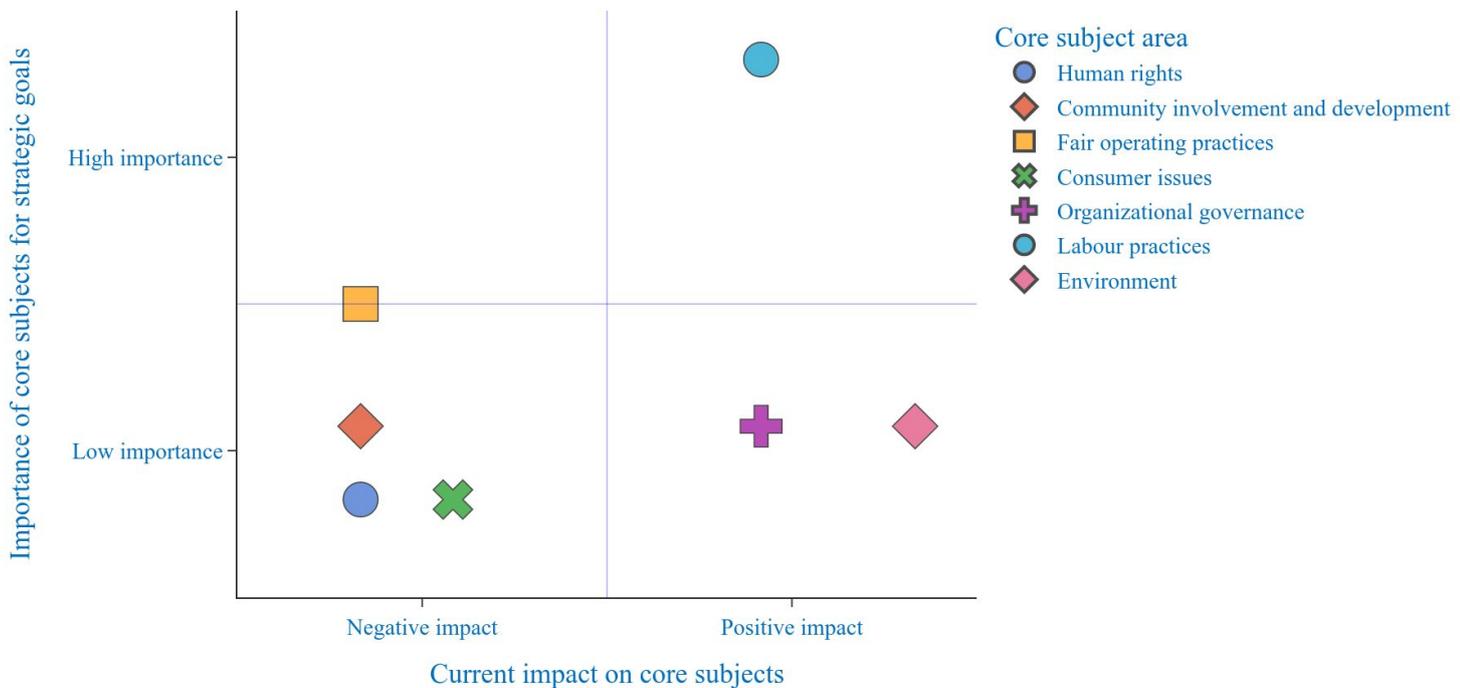

Priorities

A combined assessment of our application of the principles, our impact within the core subjects, and how the core subjects impact our strategic goals, can provide a basis for prioritization that helps us contribute even more to sustainable development.

Figure 5 shows our analysis of priorities: the estimated impact of the core subjects on our strategic goals; and our current impact on the core subjects. Core subjects in the upper right corner are thus areas where both the impact and strategic importance for us are deemed to be high. Note that core subjects with identical values share the symbol in the figure, which is also displayed in the legend.

United Nations sustainable development goals

The United Nations adopted Agenda 2030 in 2015 with 17 goals (169 sub-goals) that cover environmental, social and economic areas that together create a global framework for sustainable development.

1. No Poverty
2. Zero Hunger
3. Good Health and Well-being
4. Quality Education
5. Gender Equality
6. Clean Water and Sanitation
7. Affordable and Clean Energy
8. Decent Work and Economic Growth
9. Industry, Innovation and Infrastructure
10. Reduced Inequality
11. Sustainable Cities and Communities
12. Responsible Consumption and Production
13. Climate Action
14. Life Below Water
15. Life on Land
16. Peace, Justice and Strong Institutions
17. Partnerships for the goals

Table 2 shows our analysis of the United Nations' global goals for sustainable development; the most important for our operations and the most important for the entire world.
